Mission Statement

The mission of the Georgia Department of Corrections is to protect the public, serve victims of crime and reduce crimes committed by sentenced offenders by holding offenders accountable and providing safe and secure facilities, effective community supervision, and effective methods of self-improvement for offenders.

From the Commissioner

Our primary mission is protecting the citizens of Georgia by incarcerating 45,000 inmates and supervising 125,000 probationers. It's a difficult task, but we do it well thanks to the professionalism, dedication and hard work of our more than 14,000 employees. I cannot express my appreciation enough for the men and women of this Department who go to work every day in our prisons and probation offices across the state. It's through their efforts that this Department operates one of the most secure and dependable correctional systems in the nation.

Fiscal year 2001 was another year of growth for our inmate population as we added more than 1,700 inmates to our prison system. The growth of the Georgia inmate population, like most other states, is not caused by an influx of new prison admissions, but by inmates staying in prison longer than ever before. We experienced a slight decline in our probation population from about 130,000 to 125,000 as 2000's SB474 took effect mid-year. SB474 removed the probation division's responsibility for supervising misdemeanor probationers, allowing us to focus our resources exclusively on felony probationers.

In Georgia, our vision includes sufficient numbers of hard prison beds to house hardened criminals who prey on society. Our vision includes expanding the array of sentencing options for our judges and prosecutors that match the offender and the crime. Finally, our vision includes offering help to those offenders who want to help themselves. During the past year we created a programs division within the Department to offer evidence-based, proven correctional programs to those inmates and probationers who want to take the steps necessary to change their lives.

Our goal at Corrections is a diverse system of retribution, restitution and reparation. Fiscal year, 2001 marked the second year of an ambitious four year plan to not only add prison beds, but also enhance sentencing options like diversion centers, detention centers, transitional centers, and evidence-based correctional programming. We are grateful to Governor Barnes, the members of the General Assembly and the taxpayers of this state who have all supported our efforts to implement a more balanced approach to Georgia's system of crime and punishment.

Sincerely,

Jim Wetherington, Commissioner

Executive Office

The Commissioner is responsible for the overall supervision of the agency.

The Assistant Commissioner, the Division Directors, Executive Assistant, Board Liaison, Legislative Services, Planning, Victim Services, Public Affairs, Legal Office, Information Technology, Correctional Industries, and Engineering & Inmate Construction report to the Commissioner's Office. The Assistant Commissioner oversees the daily operation of the agency.

Facilities Division

The Facilities Division is responsible for Georgia's inmate population. This division manages the operation of all correctional facilities and is responsible for the care and custody of all state prison inmates, those state offenders who are incarcerated in county camps and private prisons, and offenders housed in probation facilities.

Programs Division

The Programs Division provides research-based programming that is effective in reducing recidivism among offenders. The Division also manages Health Services for inmates.

Probation Division

The Probation Division provides community supervision and services to over 125,000 probationers sentenced by the courts of Georgia's 48 judicial circuits.

Human Resources Division

The Human Resources Division is responsible for the issues and systems which impact the personnel component of the agency.

Administration Division

The Administration Division provides business and technical support to the other divisions within the agency.

Georgia Correctional Industries

GCI is a self-sustained operation supported by money generated from the manufacture and sale of its products and services. Over 1,800 inmates work each day in its prison plants, which include optics, carpentry, and chemicals.

Corrections in 2001

The agency's strategic direction is to efficiently improve the operation of our facilities, effectively supervise those offenders on probation, and collaborate with the courts, other criminal justice agencies, and the public to keep all Georgians safe.

A Balanced Approach

Our challenge for the 21st century is to strike a balance between “hard beds” for prisoners who warrant high security supervision and alternative beds for those offenders who could better benefit from a short-term center.

Community corrections is a vital component of Georgia's Criminal Justice System. In FY01, Corrections sought to continue probation through funding for new centers, new personnel and additional resources, including construction of Georgia's first in-patient probation drug treatment facility.

Technology

Georgia Governor Roy Barnes has mandated that all state agencies work to better inform the public, especially through electronic technology like the Internet.

Last year, the Department continued the expansion of our web site. Now, criminal justice agencies and the public can access Corrections' database of photos and criminal backgrounds of current inmates as well as inmates released in recent years. Visitors can also view a virtual tour of a prison cellblock and request information about Corrections online. Crime victims can register for notification if their attacker is ever released, and the public can download job announcements and state applications. Legislators, students, the media and other interested parties are now able to quickly access important Correctional statistics, studies, and research reports.

The GDC website, www.dcor.state.ga.us receives approximately 10 million “hits” per month.

Budget

Corrections' budget in FY01 was $887 million. Not only is the offender population growing in number, it's also getting older and in poorer health. In FY01, the medical portion of the budget was more than $120 million.

The Corrections Continuum

Regular Probation Supervision

Probationers must report to a probation officer, maintain employment, submit to drug and alcohol screens, and comply with all court-ordered requirements.

Intensive Probation Supervision

When more structure is needed than other supervision levels provide, a judge can order intensive probation supervision where the probationer is closely monitored by a team of officers.

Specialized Probation Supervision

Offenders who have committed sexual crimes, crimes against children or crimes of family violence may be subject to specialized, highly-monitored probation supervision.

Community Service

As a condition of a sentence, a probationer may be required to provide unpaid service to their community in lieu of fines and fees.

Diversion Center

A judge may order a probationer to stay at a diversion center where he works a paying job in the community and receives treatment options. The center deducts room, board, family support, restitution and fees from his paycheck.

Detention Center

A probation detention center is a minimum security facility for confining offenders. The inmates perform unpaid community work, receive treatment, and are eventually released to probation supervision.

Boot Camp

Boot camps combine discipline, hard work, and drug-education programs for non-violent offenders.

State Prison

State prisons house violent or repeat criminals, or nonviolent inmates who have exhausted all other forms of punishment.

County Prison

Some low-security, long-term state prisoners are incarcerated at county work camps. They provide unpaid, yet highly-skilled work to the counties in which they are housed.

Private Prison

Georgia has contracts for three 1,500-bed private prisons to house medium-security state inmates.

Transitional Center

After a long term in prison, selected inmates are slowly reintegrated back into society with a job and enhanced prospects for stability. Center residents work jobs in the private sector while residing in the transitional facility.

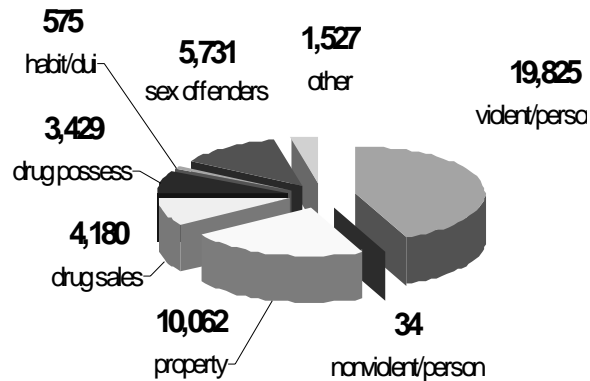

Inmate Population

The number of Georgia inmates almost doubled over the past decade. Tough laws and policies are keeping inmates behind bars for longer prison terms. Georgia has the nation's 8th-largest prison population.

Of the 45,000 inmates in prison at the end of FY01, over half were convicted of violent or sex crimes.

Half of Georgia's inmates have a 10th grade or lower education, were raised with no father at home, have a high incidence of alcohol and drug abuse, and were previously incarcerated.

Active Inmates By Most Serious Crime Type

Sentencing Laws

With more offenders being sentenced to longer prison terms, the number of inmates in Georgia prisons is increasing. This is a result of tougher laws, such as "Two Strikes", that mandates 100 percent service of sentence for persons convicted of the seven most violent crimes including murder, armed robbery and aggravated sexual crimes, and the Parole Board's requirement that persons convicted of any one of 20 other violent crimes serve at least 90 percent of their sentence.

Active Inmates Prison Sentence In Years

Security

Almost half of the cost per offender in a state facility is allocated for security, which includes the costs for correctional officers, their equipment, and their training.

Georgia inmates are assigned to a security level after a review of factors such as inmate's sentence, nature of the crime, criminal history, and history of violence.

Maximum Security

Dangerous inmates who pose a high escape risk, or have other serious problems, are assigned to this category and are housed in prisons with high levels of security.

Close Security

These inmates are escape risks, have assaultive histories, and may have detainers for other serious crimes on file. These inmates never leave the prison and require supervision at all times by a correctional officer.

Medium Security

Medium-security inmates have no major adjustment problems and most may work outside the prison fence, but must be under constant supervision.

Active Inmates By Security Status

Minimum Security

These inmates tend to abide by prison regulations, present a minimal risk of escape, and have been judged to be a minimal threat to the community.

Trusty Security

An inmate assigned to this level has proven to be trustworthy, is cooperative, and has no current alcohol/drug problems.

Risk Reduction Services

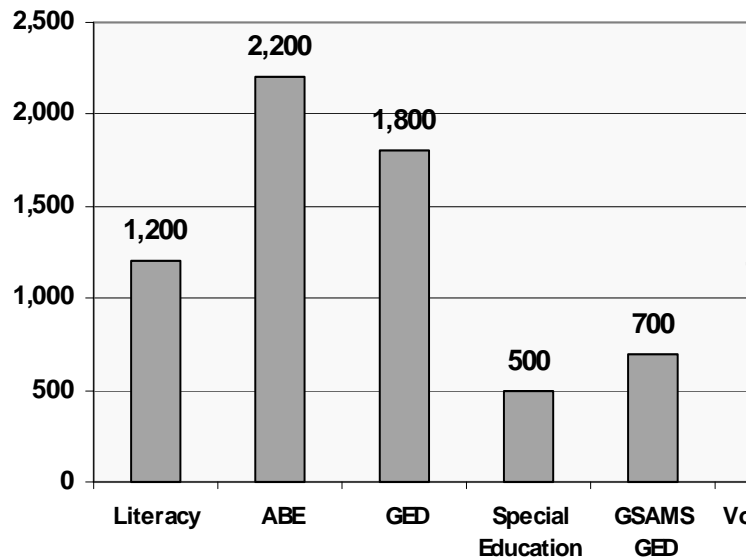

A typical inmate's daily schedule includes work, educational, vocational, and substance abuse programs, and group and individual counseling.

More inmates than ever before were enrolled in academic education during FY01, including literacy/remedial reading, GED, and special education.

Inmates have access to the prison libraries and legal materials, religious programming, substance abuse programs, counseling, and sex offender treatment.

All inmates receive a federally-mandated one hour of recreation per day.

Inmate Enrollment in Educational Progra

Health Services

Basic health care for all inmates is a Constitutionally-required mandate. In FY01, health care costs were $100 million. To help offset those increasing costs, the Department is expanding its telemedicine program and is continuing its interagency relationship with the Medical College of Georgia.

Personnel

Central Personnel Administration develops , coordinates, monitors, evaluates, and administers personnel functions for the department's 14, 791 employees.

Workforce Planning is an integral part of the strategic planning process. The GDC is required to develop and implement a workforce plan that will allow it to make accurate projections on future staffing needs and how to best meet these needs. In FY 2001, Personnel staff completed Phase 1 of the process. This phase examined the mission and vision of the department to identify new and at-risk opportunities and how to address these opportunities. The result was a workforce plan that was praised by the Merit System for its thoroughness and conciseness.

Recruitment and Testing efforts focused on aggressive recruitment for jobs with continuous vacancies such as Correctional Officer, Probation Officer, Counselor, and Food Service Supervisor. While agency recruiting tools such as the website and toll-free job information line continue to be productive applicant sources, GDC recruiters “hit the road” during the year, recruiting and testing more applicants (9,113) than in previous years. All testing sites for Correctional Officers were converted to walk-in testing sites beginning in December 2000, thereby eliminating scheduling delays. The Correctional Officer application for examination was replaced by a scannable application reducing the application processing time from the 2 to 3 weeks previously experienced to just a few days.

GDC Plus personnel staff spearheaded and coordinated the design and development of a substantially simpler, quicker, and more refined performance planning and evaluation process for the department, GDC Plus. A hallmark of GDC Plus is the “PMF Short Form” and its accompanying job performance rating elements, which eliminate the need for supervisors to write lengthy documentation and provide supervisors with precise, well-defined performance measures.

Employee Relations personnel staff worked to address the personnel needs, problems and issues of individual GDC employees through a variety of programs and services. During the year, Employee Assistance Program (EAP) consultations/referrals and Critical Incident Debriefings (CID) numbered 142. A total of 218 formal employee grievances were reviewed and processed through the GDC's grievance system. There were 134 employee written reprimand review/appeals completed.

Putting Inmates to Work

To help repay their debt to society, inmates work up to eight hours per day in the prisons, on community details, on prison farms and in on-the-job training programs.

Food and Farm

The Food and Farm Operation trains inmates in food production and processing. Three thousand inmates work in prison kitchens, processing plants and on the prison farms to help provide over 36 million inmate meals annually.

Improvements to prison farming and food processing has cut the average cost of an inmate meal to $1.60 per day in FY01, down from $2.03 per day ten years ago in FY91.

Most of the vegetables, meats, eggs, and milk consumed by Georgia inmates are produced and processed on Georgia's prison farms.

Inmate Construction

Inmate construction crews serve the construction needs of Corrections, other state agencies and communities. Inmates renovate schools and city halls, construct state park cottages, and repair bridges.

Fire Services

Minimum security inmates work in the prison fire stations responding to prison and rural fire emergencies.

Community Work Details

Low-security inmates build, refurbish and maintain prison and civic buildings, perform road work, clean public buildings and schools, and work at recycling centers and landfills.

Number of Cases of Canned Vegetables at Corrections' Canning Plant

Correctional Industries

An entirely self-supporting component of the agency, Georgia Correctional Industries (GCI) manufactures products for sale to tax-supported entities.

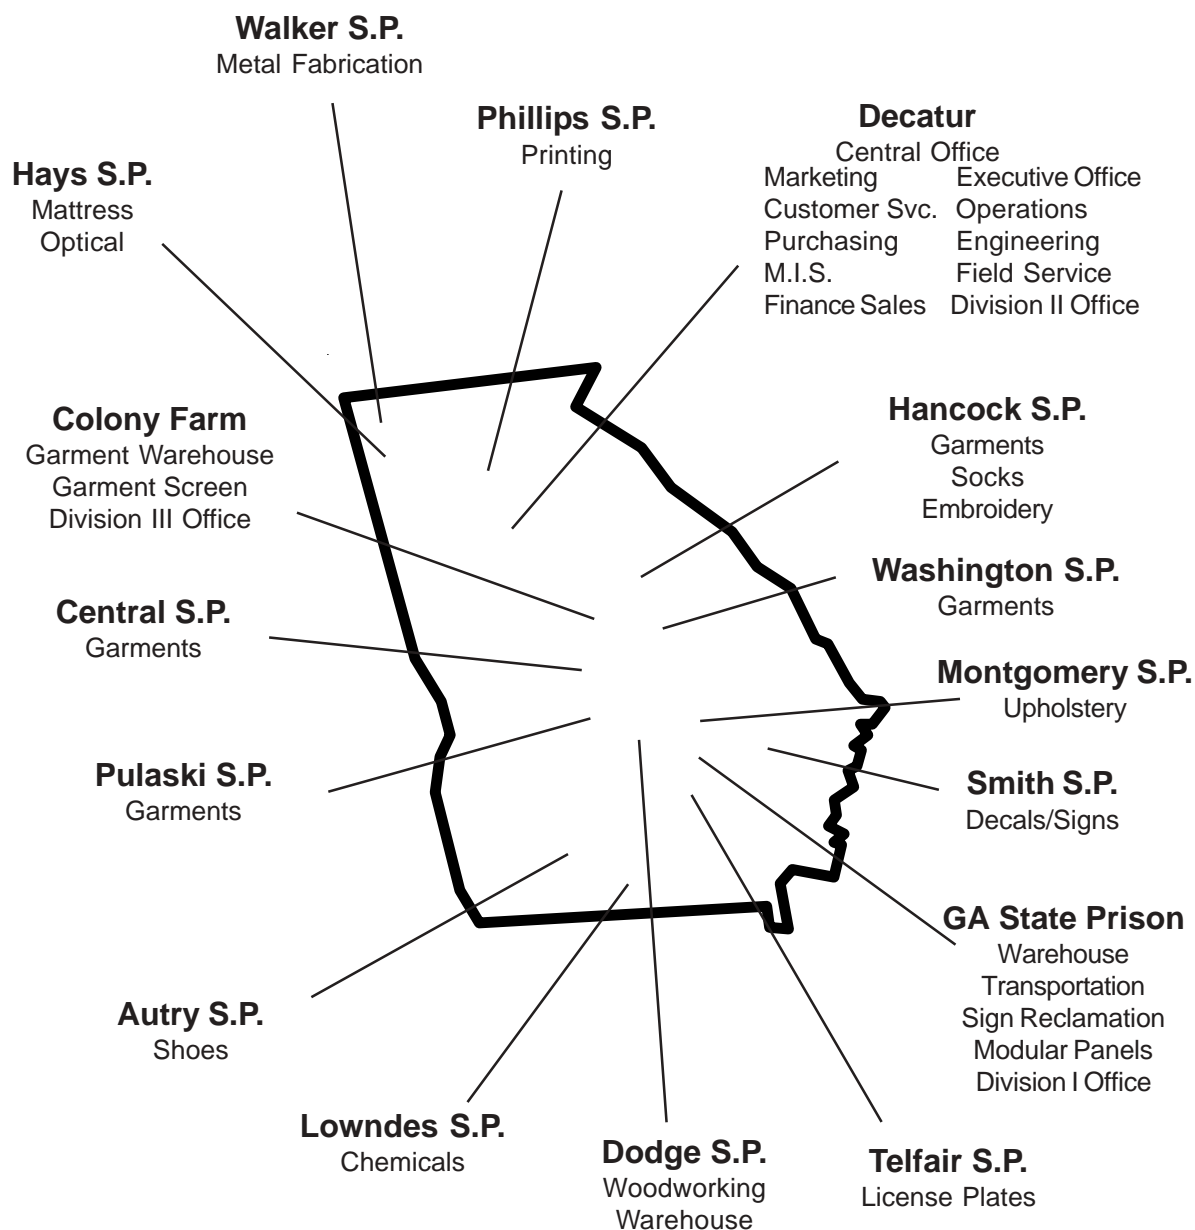

In FY01, GCI's 20 manufacturing operations located at 16 prisons generated over $28 million in sales. On any given day, over 1,800 inmates are assigned to jobs in GCI operations which include metal fabrication, optics, printing, license plates, footwear, woodworking, screen printing, upholstery, garment and chemical production.

GCI inmates learn valuable trade skills for use upon release. GCI manufactures quality products, as evidenced by sales to tax-supported entities as far away as Alaska.

“The measure of GCI’s success lies not only in its sales, but also in the trade skills taught to inmates who manufacture a quality product.”

Victim Advocacy

Victims of crime often continue to need services long after the offender has been convicted and sentenced. The Georgia Department of Corrections, Office of Victim Services offers post conviction support and assistance to crime victims. The mission of the Office of Victim Services is to work to ensure the rights and concerns of Crime Victims are recognized and protected during the correctional process.

V.I.N.E. is a 24-hour automated information system used by the Georgia Department of Corrections to provide registered victims and/or their families with access to information about their offender. By simply picking up a telephone and dialing the toll-free V.I.N.E. number, victims can obtain information regarding the status of an inmate.

V.I.N.E. also operates as a notification system. Through computer generated telephone calls, victims who have registered with the Georgia Department of Corrections will automatically receive notification of the release of their offender from custody.

During FY01, the Office of Victim Services had registered 4,857 victims of crime requesting notification of the release of their offender from the custody of Corrections.

Death Penalty in Georgia

A law, passed in FY00, changed the legal method of execution in Georgia from electrocution to lethal injection, effective for crimes committed on or after May 1, 2000. Anyone who commits a capital crime and receives a death sentence, will be executed by lethal injection.

In Georgia, 23 men have been executed since the U.S. Supreme Court upheld Georgia's death penalty in 1976.

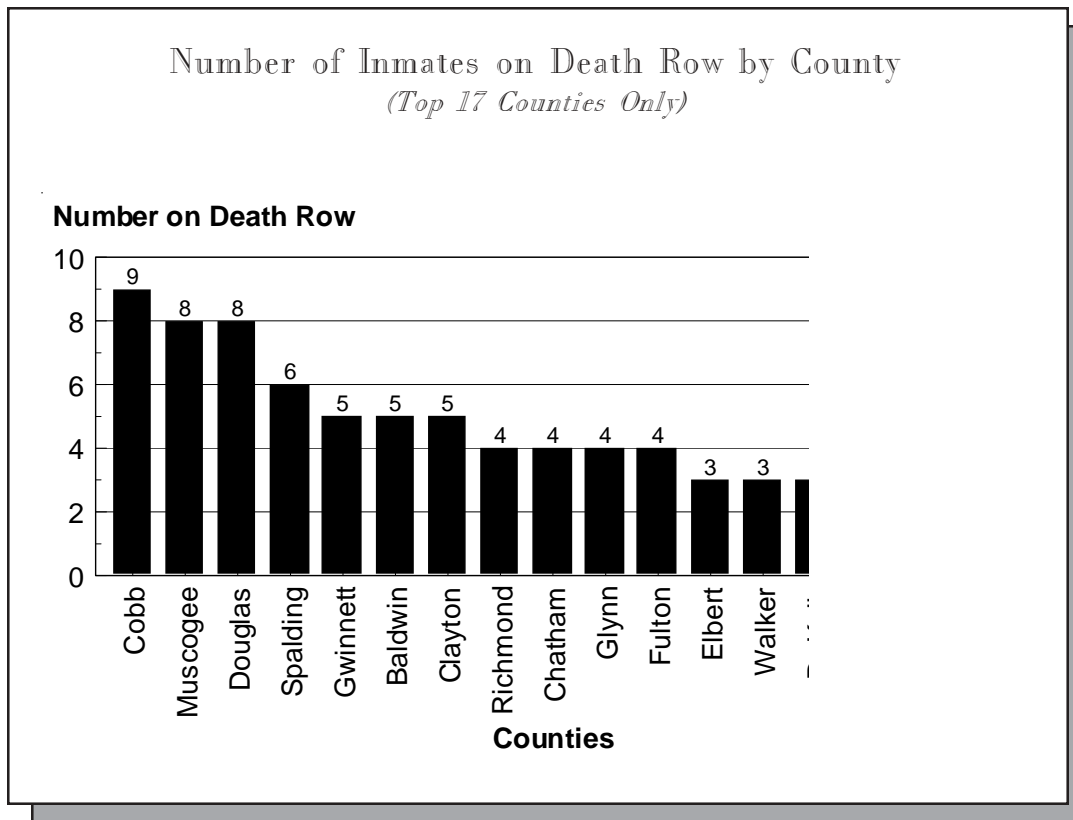

Cobb County has the highest number of inmates on death row, followed by Muscogee and Douglas counties.

Georgia had 124 inmates on death row by the end of FY01. Whites comprise 52 percent of the condemned inmates and blacks make up the remaining 48 percent.

All male death row inmates are incarcerated at the Georgia Diagnostic and Classification Prison in Jackson. One female is on death row at Metro State Prison in Atlanta.

No inmates were executed in FY2001.

Probation Supervision

Georgia uses the Risk-Based Supervision Model where all probationers are placed in one of three programs (IPS, SPS, and Regular Probation), and in one of four different classification levels (Max, High, Standard, and Administrative).

Intensive Probation Supervision (IPS)

Offenders who are court-ordered to IPS have significant substance abuse and/or violence problems. This 5 percent of the probation population requires very close supervision by specially trained teams of officers.

Specialized Probation Supervision (SPS)

This program is for sex offenders and for offenders who victimize children. This 5 percent of the probation population also requires close supervision by officers.

Regular Probation

The remaining 90 percent of probationers are mostly felony probationers who are evaluated to be of lower risk to the public. Probation officers' caseloads for regular probation average 270 per officer.

Probation Caseloads by Supervision Level

Probationers are Managed According to their Risk and Needs

Max: Violent offenders, sexual offenders, predators against children, and other extremely risky offenders.

High: Career criminals, violent offenders, predators, and others with significant risk to the community.

Standard: Mostly nonviolent offenders and those who still owe court-ordered monies. This category may include violent offenders who have shown adherence to the conditions of probation.

Administrative: Offenders who have met all financial obligations and those who have been moved to administrative (non-reporting) status in accordance with state law.

Collections

Probation officers also collect fines, monetary restitution for the crime victims, and fees which are forwarded to the state treasury. Probation collections of court-ordered fees and fines continue to rise.

In addition to supervising and monitoring probationers in the community, in FY01 the Probation Division collected $51 million from probationers in fines, costs, fees, restitution, and Georgia Crime Victim Emergency Fund fees. In addition, probation officers enforce court orders for community service which totaled more than $8 million.

Community Service

Probationers are ordered to perform community service as a condition of probation, or in lieu of fines, jail, or prison. This work repays the community, builds partnerships, and reinforces the work ethic.

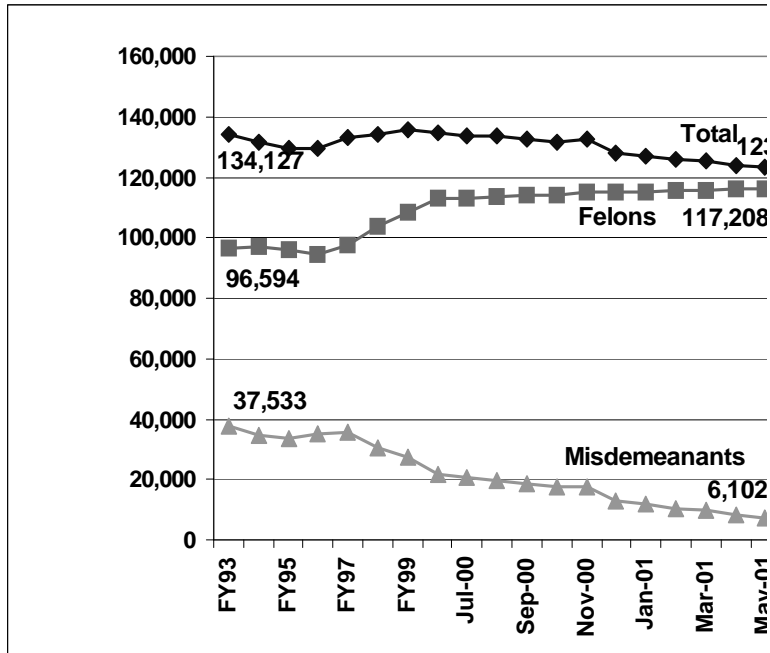

In addition to program participation or fees and fines, probationers may be ordered to perform unpaid work for the good of the community.

Community service work often takes the form of unskilled labor such as collecting litter on roadsides, mowing grass, and working in recycling centers. Yet, if a probationer has a special trade, such as a computer or technological ability, he or she may be required to perform a higher skilled community service job.

Felons and Misdemeanants

In FY00 the Georgia General Assembly ended the state supervision of misdemeanants. Local jurisdictions will contract with private or county agencies for misdemeanor probation supervision.

The number of felons on probation has been increasing since 1996. Approximately 300 new felons are being added to probation caseloads each month.

The number of serious felony offenders on probation has shown a substantial increase over the last decade.

Admits to Probation by Crime Type

Probation Programs

To ensure public safety and change in the offender, the Probation Division is putting a major emphasis on substance abuse treatment and probationer employment.

Probation offers the offender the opportunity for change outside of a prison environment. Some, however, may relapse into drug use or may otherwise need additional assistance to prevent re-offending. Here are a few examples of probation programs at work:

A joint project of Probation and the State Board of Pardons and Parole, the Atlanta Day Reporting Center is a facility for those probationers and parolees who fail to adhere to the conditions of their sentences.

Opened in 2001, the center's primary emphasis is on substance abuse and cognitive skills development.

The Bainbridge Substance Abuse Residential Center, also opened in 2001, is a nine-month residential substance abuse program for probationers who are unable to manage substance abuse issues through community counseling, and who are on the verge of revocation to prison.

The Griffin Recovery Intervention Probation Program (GRIPP) provides services to substance abusing probationers including drug and alcohol therapy, classes on life skills, personal counseling and case management.

William Larkey, Chief Probation Officer, Griffin Judicial circuit states, "GRIPP is a tough, no-nonsense program which gives probationers the opportunity to improve their lives through drug treatment, life skills, and employment programs. GRIPP benefits not only the probationer, but more importantly, helps keep our community safe."

"The Probation Division is striving to promote public safety through providing higher quality supervision while implementing research based risk reduction programs to our offenders. Our service to the courts and our posture within the law enforcement community continue to be high priorities for the Probation Division." Alan Adams, Probation Division Director
